At Pacific, It’s Personal
"You get so much attention here. The Conservatory selects its faculty to make sure every student gets only the best. The professors here care so much about you." - SHARON SU ’12

Dynamic Learning Community
Our faculty members are passionate and dedicated artists and scholars committed to providing a learning environment that is both demanding and supportive. The nurturing environment at Pacific’s Conservatory of Music includes your fellow students as well. You’ll be stimulated to think in new directions, challenged to grow and develop your artistic ability, to explore ways to make your mark in the world of music — and you’ll be making friends for life.

A Vibrant Alumni Community
"The thing that strikes me most about our alumni is their willingness to help current students and recent graduates. They’re there to mentor, provide a helping hand and to provide career guidance. That is a real strength of the Pacific network." - Denny Stilwell ’88 is president of Mack Avenue Records, Inc. and serves on the Music Management Advisory Board, comprised of music industry professionals who helps keep Pacific on the cutting edge of an ever-changing industry.

Your education here is personalized. My interest being music and law, I had the opportunity to research how Beethoven, Chopin and Haydn all protected their works in a time when copyright law wasn’t available.”

BRYCE MCLAUGHLIN ’11

“The professors have enriched my life in more ways than I can describe, in personal experiences they’ve shared with me and the lessons that we do. Just going to class is a great experience.”
